The cost of health care in the United States has increased tenfold during the last twenty-five years, tripled during the last ten years, and doubled during the last five years. In 1970, one night in an average American hospital cost $ 75. By 1980, the same hospital was charging $200. Intensive care cost more than $ 300. Today hospital charges for surgery and post-operative care can easily reach $10,000, including $3,000 for the surgeon and $700 for the anesthesiologist. One reason that the cost is so high can be traced to advances in medical technology that include expensive equipment and highly-trained, highly-paid personnel to run it. As an example, the CAT, a computerized scanner used for diagnostic purposes, now costs $600,000. The problem is all the more serious because, unlike many other countries, the U.S. does not have a national health insurance plan.

1) O que aconteceu com o custo da saúde nos últimos dez anos?

2) O que chega a custar 10,000?

3) Por quê o preço aumentou tanto?

4) De acordo com o texto, qual a diferença entre os Estados Unidos e outros países?
